

Latina lawyer uses new approach to help clients

By Angela Covo

angela.covo@gmail.com

Jennifer Espronceda, a relatively new addition to the Alamo City legal scene, has ideas. The lifelong San Antonio resident is committed to making sure people in the community have access to proper legal representation.

Her firm, Espronceda Law, PLLC, will take on all kinds of cases, and instead of farming them out by referral, will retain the best legal experts to ensure top representation, while continuing to work with the clients and guide them through the process.

The young attorney's intellectual caliber and commitment are well known and respected in the community. Already, the University of Texas at San Antonio (UTSA) is actively recruiting her to teach.

Dr. Richard Gambitta, Director of the Institute for Law and Public Affairs at UTSA explained why Espronceda would be a terrific asset for the university.

"I have been recruiting Jennifer Espronceda as an adjunct faculty for the UTSA's lauded Summer Law School Preparation Academy to teach a course in the legal studies curriculum focused on analytical reasoning and logic," he explained.

"The course provides students with the opportunity to hone their analytical skills and facilitate the drawing of reasoned conclusions as they will need to do in law school and practice. Not only do I find Jennifer's credentials, intelligence, legal education and experience, commitment, and articulation skills impressive, but I believe that she will provide an exceptional role model for our program's students," he added.

Espronceda attended University of Texas at Austin School of Law. She explains attending law school opened her horizons.

"Law school broadened my perspectives – it changed how I view the world. Now I see and understand how things work and the role the rule of law has in our society and in business," Espronceda said.

When a client walks into the Espronceda Law Firm, they are hiring a complete package. She will articulate for them, advocate for them in business negotiations or even in the courtroom. Ultimately, the primary area of expertise is helping businesses form an entity.

"From developing a house counsel policy to helping with negotiations, clients can expect to be zealously represented," Espronceda said.

Her experience ranges from family law, juvenile representation, general litigation and of course business development and formation, to matters related to oil and gas, most recently working with the Eagle Ford Shale discovery.

"Working on Eagle Ford Shale leases allows me to use my corporate knowledge and education.

It is exhilarating to be a part of big business and provide clients with the information they need to maximize returns on their land," she explained.

Clients can come to Espronceda with just about any legal issue, and she will be by their side throughout the process.

"I work hand-in-hand with other attorneys to make sure my clients always have the best advice and representation for the matter at hand," she explained.

At the moment, Espronceda contracts with eight of the top attorneys in town to ensure seamless service and the best possible legal representation.

Saturday, from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. at Luciano's Rivercenter Mall location, 849 East Commerce, Espronceda is launching the new practice. The event is open to the public and everyone is invited to drop by.

This is an excellent opportunity to learn more about this new style of practicing law. Espronceda will explain more about her practice and will introduce the attorneys she works with for their expertise in different legal areas.

For more information about the attorney or her practice, visit Esproncedalaw.com.

Jennifer Espronceda works with eight top local attorneys to make sure her clients have outstanding legal representation for every scenario. (Courtesy photo)